

When is someone going to stand up for the people's rights? The FCC needs to quit getting pushed around by politicians who have their hands in the pocketbooks of the MPAA and the RIAA.

I want the right to pause live-TV and watch it later. I should have the right to burn a copy of a music CD for my 5 year old, so when they break it, I don't have to buy them a new one, I just create a new copy.

But Hollywood would like to pressure the FCC to have me subscribe to a cable service and pay a monthly fee, then pay an enormous fee to get a movie channel (with 5 additional channels I don't want or use), then watch all their commercials, then only have 1 movie played 1 time for 1 person, or pay more money.

Stand up for consumer's rights!
